

PRESS RELEASE

Rinchem continues to strategically position itself for international services with its acquisition of Roland's Bonded Warehouses serving the port of Savannah, GA.

Albuquerque, NM. March 1, 2007 – Rinchem Company, Inc. announced today it has purchased the warehousing and drayage assets of Roland's Bonded Warehouse, Inc, consisting of 5 warehouse locations and drayage units serving the Georgia Ports Authority, Savannah Port. These facilities will continue to offer warehousing, drayage and many related services to Roland's established clientele while establishing the capabilities to provide import and export services to Rinchem's established clientele. These facilities represent Rinchem's first expansion into the Southeast and will provide additional port access and warehousing capability to service customers internationally.

Rinchem will soon equip these facilities with its Chem-Star[®] inventory management system adding it to Rinchem's international network of facilities linked together to provide customers with 24/7, real-time visibility of their materials via the web.

Jim Moore, President of Rinchem, stated "We are excited to be moving into the Southeastern U.S. and adding assets on the east coast to help fulfill the demands for our services. This enables us to further expand our Chemical Management Services into this market and provides an efficient link to our other facilities and customers both in the US and internationally. Along with our recently opened operation in the Long Beach, CA. port and established sites in the Bay area, Portland and the Boston area, this location positions us to continue expansion of international supply chain management services."
